

What do I do if someone becomes unwell at an educational or childcare setting?

Version 1.01 26 May 2020

- Whilst awaiting collection, the child should either:
 - i. be moved to a room where they are isolated behind a closed door or, if this is not possible
 - ii. be at least 2 metres away from other people.
- A window should be left open for ventilation.
- Staff should wear PPE, if a distance of 2 metres cannot be maintained with the child.
- If required and where possible, a separate bathroom should be used. This should be cleaned and disinfected using standard cleaning products before being used by anyone else.

- The staff member in contact with the individual should wash their hands thoroughly for 20 seconds after contact
- The affected area should be cleaned with normal household disinfectant after someone with symptoms has left. For more guidance see the COVID-19: cleaning of non-healthcare settings guidance.
- The staff member that had contact with the individual does not need to go home unless:
 - i. They develop a new, continuous cough, high temperature or anosmia or
 - ii. the child subsequently tests positive.
- Whilst waiting for test results, the individual's peers, and staff members do not need to self-isolate, unless they experience symptoms themselves

The individual's class or group within the setting (including staff) should be sent home and advised to isolate for 14 days. Other household members of that wider group do not need to isolate unless the person within the group develops symptoms.

The individual may return to the education setting and household members can end self-isolation. No further action is required.
